

In reference to the issue of allowing CBA members to make "unwanted" sales calls to existing customers on the "Do Not Call" list, I would highly recommend that the FCC let stand the Indiana law as is. Indiana citizens have chosen to be on this list for one reason, which is not to be bothered by harassing telemarketers. If I want my bank(s) to sell me something, I will let them know that.

If you let the CBA call existing customers, that will open the flood gates to all other businesses to make unwanted sales calls and nullify the states law. Again I highly recommend the FCC stands behind the Indiana law and not cave into these special interests.

Thank you.
